

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. PREFACE.

THIS book is planned for an introductory course in Anglo-Saxon. The glossary has been constructed so as both to facilitate the use of a grammar and to reduce the necessity of grammatical notes. Cook's excellent translation of Sievers' Grammar has made available for reference the best exposition of Anglo-Saxon phonology and inflection. March's Grammar will assist the teacher in matters relating to syntax.

In the choice of texts by which the student is to be introduced to the language and literature of Anglo-Saxon times, an editor is compelled, in view of the practical end, to suppress many considerations: there must be gradation that may contradict chronology, or dialectal relationship; there must be a degree of variety that may do violence to completeness. An adjustment in partial harmony with all reasonable requirements is as much as can be hoped for.

The West-Saxon dialect, though not exactly in the line of the subsequent development of the language, is yet best adapted to the conditions of the beginner, for it possesses sufficient uniformity in phonology and inflection, the grammars are based upon it, and it embraces most of the literature. The style and the character of the literature also determine the easiest introduction to be through the later form of this dialect. The following texts have been selected and arranged in accordance with these views. The first three extracts are intended to supply a sufficient basis for an elementary preparation that will fit the student to pass to the study of the Early West-Saxon dialect, and thereafter to read the literature in chronological order. Any slight admixture of dialectal forms will be easily understood by the use of Sievers' Grammar.

Most of the selected texts, it will be observed, are such as have been employed, either wholly or in part, in other Anglo-Saxon Readers. In the case of some of them, exclusion from an introductory course would be welcome to few teachers; in the case of others, the choice cannot be expected to please all. The selections which are now admitted for the first time will, it is hoped, serve an obvious purpose.

The texts are given according to the best manuscript sources, without normalization, without silent changes, and, for the most part, with but slight emendations. The variant readings, in some cases complete even for unessential details, are to give a wider view of the condition of the language and of the orthographic fashion of the scribes. The first, second, ninth, tenth, eleventh, and eighteenth selections are based upon my own copies and collations of the manuscripts. For the homily on St. Gregory Professor W. W. Skeat, of Cambridge, has collated the Cambridge MS., and Professor Arthur Napier, of Oxford, has supplied the readings (given in full) of the next best MS., that of the Bodleian Library. The seventeenth and nineteenth selections are according to the collations of Dr. Frank G. Hubbard, of the University of California. For the extracts from the Bede the recent edition by Miller has been used, and for the 'Wars of Alfred,' Plummer's edition of the Chronicles. The remaining texts have been taken from the publications of Thorpe, Sweet, Earle, and Morris.

Orthographic variation (chiefly due to chronological differences in the texts) has made difficult a compact yet clear arrangement of the glossary; however, the variant forms in parentheses, the principal parts of the verbs, and the citations will be found, it is believed, to mitigate the somewhat sparing use of cross-references. The etymological hints conveyed either in the definitions or by the bracketed forms will suggest some of the fundamental principles of derivation, but they are especially meant to lead the student to consult the Etymological Dictionaries of Skeat and Kluge.

It is pleasant to acknowledge the special obligations incurred in the preparation of this book. The kind assistance, already mentioned, given by Professor Skeat and Professor Napier is to be added to many personal kindnesses in the past; I also regard it as a further pledge of their hearty interest in the cause of English studies in America. My thanks are due to Dr. Frank G. Hubbard for the use of a sheaf of his first gleanings in the libraries of England, and to Professor James Morgan Hart, of Cornell University, for valuable suggestions always freely given. More than can be expressed in a brief acknowledgment is due to Professor George Lyman Kittredge, of Harvard University; he has read the entire work in proof, with the discrimination of a scholar and with the helpfulness of a friend.

I. THE ANGLO-SAXON GOSPELS.

There is only one known Anglo-Saxon translation of the four Gospels (the remaining books of the New Testament were not translated into Anglo-Saxon). The dialect is Late West-Saxon. It is not known by whom or at what place this translation was made; its exact date is also undetermined, but it is agreed that this must be looked for within the limits of the last quarter of the tenth century, and presumably within the latter half of that period. Four early manuscript copies are preserved: (1) Corpus Christi Coll. Camb. MS. 140; (2) Bodl. Lib. MS. 441; (3) Cotton MS. Otho C. I. (seriously injured by fire); (4) Camb. Univ. Lib. MS. II. 2. 11. Of these the first three are supposed to belong to the last decade of the tenth century (Skeat), though this date has been questioned as being somewhat too early (Reimann). The Corpus MS. is preferred as a basis for a critical text; the Bodl. and Cotton MSS. are closely related to each other and constitute a separate group, and the Univ. Lib. MS. is separated from the other three by orthographic and minor differences which mark it as later in date (Skeat places it at about the year 1050). Two additional copies are preserved which belong to a period after the Conquest and to the Kentish district (Reimann: "Die Sprache der mittelenkischen Evangelien," Berlin, 1883). The first of these (Bibl. Reg. MS. 1. A. xiv., Brit. Mus.) is exclusively based on the Bodl. MS., and the second (Hatton MS. 38, Bodl. Lib.) is copied from the first. The Anglo-Saxon translator's original was one of the Vulgate manuscripts. The translation is for the most part clear and simple in style and vocabulary, but a conservative regard for the original has to some degree unduly influenced constructions and collocations, and occasional errors point to misapprehension of the Latin. The latest and the best edition of these Gospels is that of Professor W. W. Skeat (Cambridge University Press, 1871-1887).¹

1, 2. — tō. Notice the position of the prepositional adverb.

1, 3-4. — sēo mēnegu . . . wāron. A collective noun may take a plural verb; cf. the variant A, and the preceding line.

1, 6. — tō sāwenne. The gerund (the dat. of the inf. with the prep. tō) expresses the purpose of motion.

1, 8. — stānscyligean. This substantive use of the adj. agrees with the Latin, which has petrosa. The weak form of the adj., however, requires a demonstrative (cf. pā stānscyligean, 2, 15); the strong form which we should here expect is stānscylige (cf. on stānihte: in petrosa, Matt. xiii. 5).

1, 8-9. — ūpstigendne and wexendne wæstm. This emendation is in conformity with the original: et dabat fructum ascendentem et crescentem.

1, 15. — þritigfealdne etc. The noun wæstm is understood; cf. the variant A.

2, 2. — tō gehýranne. The gerund may limit a noun or adjective.

2, 3-4. — pā twelfe þe mid him wāron: hi qui cum eo erant duodecim; some Latin texts have cum duodecim.

2, 5. — tō witanne etc. The gerund clause is here the logical subject of an impersonal verb; a final clause may take the place of this construction: ēow is geseald þæt gē witun Godes rices gerýne, Luke viii. 10.

2, 19. — and hrædlice etc. has been supplied from Matt. xiii. 21, in accordance with the usual Latin text: confestim scandalizantur.

2, 21-23. — The MSS. read: and of yrmðe and swicðome woroldwelene (A, -welena) and ðōra gewilnunga þæt word ofþrysmað (A, -iað), and synt būton wæstm gewordene: et aerumnæ saeculi et deceptio divitiarum et circa reliqua concupiscentiæ introeuntes suffocant verbum, et sine fructu efficitur. The emendations of the text are based on the following corresponding passages: and þonne geornfullnes þisse worulde and lēasung þisse woroldwelena forþrysmiaþ þæt word, and hit is būton wæstm geworden: et sollicitudo saeculi istius et fallacia divitiarum suffocat verbum, et sine fructu efficitur (Matt. xiii. 22); and of carum and of welum and of lustum þyses lifes synt forþrysmode, and nānné wæstm ne bringað: et a sollicitudinibus et divitiis et voluptatibus vite euntes suffocantur, et non referunt fructum (Luke viii. 14).

3, 1. — Cwyst þū cymð þæt lēohtfæt þæt etc.: Numquid venit lucerna ut sub modio ponatur. Forms of secgan and of cweðan are used as interrogative particles. — cymð is apparently a Latinism.

3, 12. — gōd is supplied by the translator.

4, 1. — hī onfēgon etc.: assumunt eum, ita ut erat, in navi. The sense requires a change in the order of the words: e.g. swā hē wæs, on scipe.

4, 3. — hē (i.e. wind).

II. ORPHEUS AND EURYDICE.

This narrative (also chapters ix., x., and xi., below) is taken from the so-called Alfredian version of the De Consolatione Philosophiæ of Anicius Manlius Severinus Boethius. Boethius, born at Rome about the year 475 A.D., was a man of senatorial rank and of high favor at the court of Theoderic. Among his notable acts in public life was his courageous defence of the senator Albinus against a charge of treason. This furnished his enemies an occasion to turn the accusation against himself. Their malignant purpose prevailed, and Boethius was unjustly condemned, and cast into prison at Ticinum (Pavia). It was during this imprisonment that he wrote the celebrated work on the Consolation of Philosophy. His goods were confiscated, and he was tortured and executed in the year 525.

Boethius was a renowned scholar and a skilful writer. He studied Plato and Aristotle with special ardor, and wrote and translated important works on philosophy, logic, mathematics, and music, by which he not only transmitted Greek learning to his contemporaries, but more especially exerted a marked influence upon mediæval scholasticism. The De Consolatione Philosophiæ is undoubtedly his most famous work. In form (prose intermingled with verse) it is in the tradition of the Menippean satire, and bears some resemblance to the De Nuptiis Philologiæ et Mercurii of Martianus Capella. The following summary of the work is taken from the ninth edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica:

"The first book opens with a few verses, in which Boethius describes how his sorrows had turned his hair gray; and had brought him to a premature old age. As he is thus lamenting, a woman appears to him of dignified mien, whom for a time he cannot distinguish in consequence of his tears, but at last recognizes her as his guardian, Philosophy. She, resolving to apply the remedy for his grief, puts some questions to him for that purpose. She finds that he believes that God rules the world, but does not know what he himself is; and this absence of self-knowledge is the cause of his weakness. In the second book Philosophy presents to Boethius Fortune, who is made to state to him the blessings he has enjoyed, and after that proceeds to discuss with him the kind of blessings that fortune can bestow, which are shown to be unsatisfactory and uncertain. In the third book Philosophy promises to lead him to true happiness, which is to be found in God alone; for since God is the highest good, and the highest good is true happiness, God is true happiness. Nor can real evil exist, for since God is all-powerful, and since he does not wish evil, evil must be non-existent. In the fourth book Boethius raises the question, Why, if the governor of the universe is good, do evils exist, and why is virtue often punished and vice rewarded? Philosophy proceeds to show that this takes place only in appearance; that vice is never unpunished nor virtue unrewarded. From this Philosophy passes into a discussion in regard to the nature of providence and fate, and shows that every fortune is good. The fifth and last book takes up the question of man's free will and God's foreknowledge, and by an exposition of the nature of God, attempts to show that these doctrines are not subversive of each other; and the conclusion is drawn that God remains a foreknowing spectator of all events, and the ever-present eternity of his vision agrees with the future quality of our actions, dispensing rewards to the good and punishments to the wicked."

Translations of this work by King Alfred, Chaucer, and Queen Elizabeth testify to the esteem in which England has held it. Of the Alfredian translation only two complete manuscripts have become known; these are, however, later than Alfred's day, and represent the late West-Saxon dialect with more or less of an admixture of non-West-Saxon forms. The better copy (MS. Cotton, Otho A. 6), which was seriously damaged in the fire of 1731, is unique in containing a metrical version of most of the poems of the original; it apparently belongs to the first half of the tenth century. The second copy (MS. Bodl. 180) is entirely in prose, and as much as three-quarters of a century later than the first. The only available edition of this Anglo-Saxon text is that of Samuel Fox (Bohn's Antiquarian Library, London, 1864); the Latin original is edited by Peiper (Teubner, Leipsic, 1871). Consult further: Teuffel, History of Roman Literature (5th. ed.); Ebert, Allgemeine Geschichte der Literatur des Mit- telalters im Abendlande (Leipsic, 1874-1887); Simcox, A History of Latin Literature from Ennius to Boethius.

The tale of Orpheus and Eurydice, in the form of a poem, closes the third book of the original. In the Anglo-Saxon version only the introductory lines, which precede the tale itself, are in metre (Grein, Vol. II., p. 326, no. xxiii). Notice the characteristic pointing of the moral at the end. On the life and works of Alfred the Great, see Stephen's Dictionary of National Biography, Freeman's History of the Norman Conquest of England, Vol. I., Green's Conquest of England, ten Brink's Early English Literature, and Earle's Anglo-Saxon Literature.

III. ACCOUNT OF THE POET CÆDMON.

This extract (also 'The Conversion of Edwin,' below) is taken from the so-called Alfredian version of Bede's Historia Ecclesiastica Gentis Anglorum. Bede (Bæda or Beda) was born in the neighborhood of Wearmouth about the year 673, and died in the year 735. At the age of seven he was placed under the charge of Benedict Biscop, abbot of Wearmouth, and while yet a child was transferred to the neighboring monastery at Jarrow, where, ordained a deacon at nineteen and a priest at thirty, he spent the remainder of his life. He was a man of gentle and devout spirit, zealous in religion, and assiduous in study, of wide and varied learning, and a voluminous writer. He wrote in Latin. See Ebert, Teuffel, Stephen, ten Brink, and Earle. Bede's greatest work, the Church History of the Anglian People, was completed in the last years of his life, and is therefore "the ripest fruit of his pen." It is thus summarized by Ebert:

"This work is divided into five books. The first twenty-two chapters of the first book form only an introduction, wherein after a short description of Britain and its ancient inhabitants we have the history of the country reaching from Julius Cæsar (with particular reference to its earlier conversion to Christianity, on the basis of Orosius, whom Bede often follows word for word, and especially Gildas, whose history here supplies the clue throughout) to the introduction of Christianity among the Angles by Gregory's missionaries. Only from this point (chap. 23) begins the work proper and independent research of Bede. The church history of the Angles is then carried down in this book to the death of Gregory the Great, A.D. 604. The second book begins with a long obituary of this pope so important for England's church, and ends with the death of Edwin, king of Northumberland, A.D. 633. The third book reaches to 665, when Wighart went to Rome to be consecrated archbishop of Canterbury; but as he dies in Rome, Theodore, the monk of Tarsus, is consecrated by the pope in his room. Here begins the fourth book, extending to the death of Cuthbert (687), the famous saint already twice celebrated by Bede himself. The last book (to the year 731) concludes with a survey of the several sees and of the general state of Britain in that year, when profound peace led many nobles to exchange arms for cloister life" (Mayor and Lumby's edition of the third and fourth books of Bede's Hist., Cambridge, 1881)."

The complete Latin text is accessible in a convenient edition by G. H. Moberly, Oxford, 1881, and in another by A. Holder, Freiburg and Tübingen, 1882. A valuable historical study based on Bede is embraced in Chapters on Early English Church History, by William Bright, Oxford, 1888.

The Anglo-Saxon version of this work has recently been published by the Early English Text Society; the editor, Dr. Thomas Miller, argues that "the evidence of the dialect favours production on Mercian soil" (see his Introduction).

Bede's account of the earliest named English poet possesses genuine interest; though clothed in a legend which, with variations, is found recurring in literature since the Dream of Hesiod, in other respects the details are to be accepted as trustworthy (see ten Brink's Appendix A). Cædmon is supposed to have died in the year 680.

8, 1. — In ƿeosse abbudissan mynstre, 'In the monastery of this abbess,' i.e. in the monastery at Streaneshalh (Whitby) of its founder and first abbess Hild.

8, 16. — and hē for ƿon etc. : unde nihil unquam frivoli et super- vacui poematis facere potuit; sed ea tantummodo quae ad religionem pertinent, religiosam eius linguam decebant. — lēasunge nē idles lēopes, partitive genitive. — ac efne þā ān ƿā ƿe etc., 'but just those [songs] only which it became his (the) pious tongue to sing'; notice that the possessive (his) precedes the article; Sweet changes þā (before ƿfestan) to þære (dat.) as required by the usual construction of geda- fenian, and regards the acc. as possibly a "slavish following of the Latin" (cf. the gloss. at Luke iv. 43 of the Durham Book, oportet me : gedæfneð mec ; March).

9, 4. — gelyfdre ylde. A predicate genitive may denote a characteristic of the subject.

9, 5-6. — þonne þær wæs blisse intinga gedēmed etc. : cum esset laetitiae causa decretum ut omnes per ordinem cantare deberent. "The translator has evidently taken causa for the nom. instead of the abl." (Sweet), otherwise he would have written for intingan.

9, 15. — Cedmon (or Cædmon). The theories respecting this name are summed up by Cook (Publications of the Mod. Lang. Association of America, Vol. VI., p. 9 f.).

9, 22. — þā fers qnd þā word etc. Notice the variation from the Latin : versus quos numquam audierat, quorum iste est sensus.

9, 25 f. — Cædmon's Hymn. Bede himself merely translates this hymn into Latin, but copies of it in Anglo-Saxon are found at blank spaces of Latin MSS. of his History ; of these copies the most important is given at the end of the Moore MS. (Kk. 5. 16, Cam. Univ. Lib.), for this is in the Northumbrian dialect and substantially represents, it is believed, the hymn in its original form. It is as follows :

nu scylun hergan hefaenricaes uard, metudæs maecti end his modgidanc, uerc uuldurfadur ; sue he uundra gihuaes, eci dryctin, or astelidæ.
he aerist scop aelda barnum heben til hrofe, haleg scepen.
Tha middungeard moncynnæs uard, eci dryctin, æfter tiadæ firum folda frea allmectig.
Primo cantavit Cædmon istud carmen.

This Northumbrian copy is presumably as early as the year 737 (see Sweet, The Oldest English Texts, London, 1885, p. 148). For a list of the occurrences of this hymn in MSS., see Miller's ed. of the Anglo-Saxon Bede, p. xvii f. The Anglo-Saxon translator of Bede's History did not therefore reconstruct the hymn on the basis of Bede's Latin version, but inserted it in its current vernacular form (see ten Brink, Appendix A).

10, 7-8. — qnd þām wordum etc. : et eis mox plura, in eundem modum verba Deo digni carminis adiunxit. . Agreement with the Latin is here very close; we should expect on [or in] þæm ilcan gemete (Sweet). wyrðe (= dignus) usually governs the genitive, but other instances of its use with the dative are found in the Bede (Englische Studien, XV., p. 159 f.).

10, 21. — þā hē ʒā hæfde þā wisan onfongne etc.: at ille suscepto negotio abiit.

11, 6. — þætte seolfan þā his lārēowas etc.: (suaviusque resonando) doctores suos vicissim auditores sui faciebat.

11, 26-27. — betýnde qnd geendode: conclussit. — gewitenesse qnd forðfōre: decessus. A single Latin word is frequently rendered by two synonyms.

13, 9-13. — qnd sēo tunge . . . betýnde: illaque lingua quae tot salutaria verba in laudem Conditoris composuerat, ultima quoque verba in laudem ipsius [componeret], signando sese et spiritum suum in manus eius commendando, clauderet [vitam].

IV. CYNEWULF AND CYNEHEARD.

This chapter introduces the student to the famous Anglo-Saxon Chronicles.

"As a body of history [these annals] extend from A.D. 449 to 1154, — that is, exclusive of the book-made annals that form a long avenue at the beginning, and start from Julius Cæsar. The period covered by the age of the extant manuscripts is hardly less than three hundred years, from about A.D. 900 to about A.D. 1200. A large number of hands must have wrought from time to time at their production, and, as the work is wholly anonymous and void of all external marks of authorship, the various and several contributions can only be determined by internal evidence" (Earle, Anglo-Saxon Lit.). Earle himself has examined and set forth this evidence (Two of the Saxon Chronicles, Oxford, 1865; see also ten Brink, Early English Lit.).

The annal of 755 (written at least as late as the year 784, and apparently entered later than the annal of that year) is a remarkable example of early vernacular prose. "We do not meet with so vivid and circumstantial a piece of history till more than a hundred years later" (Sweet). "The syntax is not more rugged than that of Thucydides. It corresponds well to the time which produced it, in which brief efforts of diction had been long familiar, but a sustained narrative not often attempted in writing" (Earle, English Prose, London, 1890).

The Parker MS., from which the text is taken, represents the Early West-Saxon dialect, the language of Alfred the Great (see Sievers' Grammar, Appendix).

14, 1. — Hēr, 'at this place in the annals.' The manuscripts were first marked off in spaces or lines for each year, which were to be filled in as the compiler might find matter. "Many of these spaces remained blank to the last. . . . Out of this mechanical process of construction grew the fashion of beginning the annals with an adverb, not of time, but of place" (Earle).

14, 2. — wīotan forms with Cynewulf a compound subject; the verb agrees with the first and nearest member of the subject. Cf. Abraham forðferde and wītegan, 'Abraham and the prophets died.' Ælfric, Hom. II., 232, 18.

15, 8. — The slaying of the king is thus reported in the annal of 784 (6): Hēr Cynheard ofslōh Cynewulf cyning, qnd hē þær wearþ ofslægen qnd lxxxiii mōnna mid him.

V. WARS OF ALFRED THE GREAT.

The reign of Alfred the Great (871-901) was begun on the battlefield against the incursions of the Danes. The following annals belong to the warmest and most detailed narratives of some of the king's military campaigns. "The style assumes a different aspect; without losing the force and simplicity of the earlier pieces, it becomes refined and polished to a high degree" (Sweet). Freeman's History of the Norman Conquest of England, Vol. I., and Green's Conquest of England are important for the history of these times.

16, 11. — on Æscesdūne, 'at Ashdown' (Berkshire). For comments on this battle of Ashdown, see Freeman, Old English History (London, 1876), p. 111 f., and Green, The Conquest of England, p. 102 f.

16, 20. — qnd fela þūsenda ofslægenra, 'and many thousands [were] slain'; ofslægenra is gen. by attraction and agrees with þūsenda.

17, 13. — and hine longe on dæg gefliemde etc. This "is one of those fights in which we read that the English drove the Danes to flight, and yet that the Danes kept possession of the place of slaughter. In battles between irregular levies and a smaller but better disciplined band of invaders, this result is not so unlikely as it seems at first sight" (Freeman).

17, 27. — on Lymene mūþan. The ancient river 'Limen' has altogether disappeared. Mr. Etheridge of the Geological Survey of Great Britain says: "I think the great alluvial plain of Romney Marsh and Walling Marsh covers up much of the early physical history of that coast. There is no reason whatever why, in former times, there may not have been an extensive river running up to Appledore either from Romney or Rye, or even Hythe" (Notes in Earle's ed.).

18, 1. — hundtwelftigas. The genitive with an adjective (lang) may denote measure.

18, 4. — firi mīla fram þām mūþan ūtewardum, 'four (acc. of extent) miles (partitive gen.) from the outside (the lower part) of the mouth' (cf. 24, 14).

18, 19. — gif hie ænigne feld sēcan wolden, 'if they were to come out into the open field' (Sweet).

19, 8. — ac hī hæfdon þā heora stemn gesetenne etc., 'but they had then sat out (served) their term of military service and exhausted their supplies.' When habban forms a compound tense with the pp. of a transitive verb, the pp. is often inflected to agree with the object.

19, 21. — būton swiþe gewaldenum dæle etc., 'except a very inconsiderable body of the people (i.e. self-enlisted volunteers, and not strictly a part of the "fled"; Earle) [which turned] eastwards.'

20, 7. — Hæfdon hī hiora onfangen, 'they (Alfred and Athelred) had received them (the sons of Hæsten) [as godchildren].'

20, 12. — his (i.e. Hæsten's) cumpæder. Ethelred (Æþerēd) being godfather to one of the sons of Hæsten, cumpæder here expresses his consequent relationship to Hæsten himself, and not that between the two godfathers Alfred and Ethelred (co-sponsors).

24, 14. — æt ufewardum etc., 'at the upper (inner) part of the mouth (estuary) on dry land.'

25, 12. — ær ealra hāligra mæssan, 'before the feast of Allhal-lows, or All Saints' (November 1st).

VI. ALFRED'S PREFACE TO THE PASTORAL CARE.

In learning and literature Alfred the Great was both patron and author; "he writes, just as he fights and legislates, with a single eye to the good of his people" (Freeman). The Danes had wrought an "intellectual ruin," which, after the treaty at Wedmore in 878, he labored to repair. The literary leadership which once belonged to Northumbria was now set up in Wessex. Poetry had flourished in the Northumbrian period; in Wessex the first great period of prose was now ushered in.

In this preface from the king's own hand we have a comment on the state of learning in his kingdom, an expression of his theory for the education of youth, and an account of his aim and method in supplying, by the help of scholars whom he had gathered around him, vernacular versions of celebrated books.

26, 1, 2. — Ælfrēd kining hāteð. The third person of formal greeting; hāte (first pers.) introduces the discourse (cf. 107, 1, 2). The meaning of hātan is here also merely formal. — Wærferð, bishop of Worcester. Alfred intended to send a copy of this work to each bishop in his kingdom (29, 5 f.), and accordingly left a blank space between grētan and biscep for the insertion of a different name in each copy. The Hatton MS. (of the text) is unique in having the name of the bishop filled in; on the first page is also written: Ðeos bōc sceal tō Wlōgora Ceastre.

27, 26. — wundrade. Notice that this verb governs both the genitive (wlōtona) and the clause introduced by ðæt.

VII. FROM THE PASTORAL CARE.

Pope Gregory the Great was born about 540 and died in 604. Many details of his life are set forth in Ælfric's homily given below (XV.). His work on the duties and responsibilities of the episcopal office was for centuries held in high esteem, and was often at Church Councils "authoritatively recognized as the standard of life and doctrine for bishops" (Bramley). A convenient summary of the work is given by J. Barnby, Gregory the Great [The Fathers for English Readers], London, 1879. The text of the original is edited by R. H. Bramley, Oxford and London, 1874. The Anglo-Saxon version is edited by Sweet for the Early English Text Society (1871); being preserved in two manuscripts (Hatton, 20, Bodl. Lib., and Cotton Tiberius, B. XI., Brit. Mus.) which are regarded as contemporary with Alfred, "it affords data of the highest value for fixing the grammatical peculiarities of the West-Saxon dialect of the ninth century [Early West-Saxon]" (Sweet).

30, 1. — þū leofusta brōður. The work is addressed to John, Bishop of Ravenna; Gregory justifies his reluctance in accepting the popedom, as well as his composition of this work, by his deep sense of the responsibility of the pastoral office.

30, 8. — qnd sē ƿe hī etc. : et qui incaute expetiit, adeptum se esse pertimescat. The tense of underfēnge is probably not due to the Latin, but is rather in lively anticipation of the completed act.

31, 13. — cræft. The Latin has arcem, which was possibly "mis-read as artem" (Sweet).

31, 16. — For ƿon ƿe nān cræft etc. 'Since no art is for him to teach who has not first diligently learned it.'

32, 4. — 'Hī sēcaſ' etc. Matt. xxiii. 6, 7.

32, 14. — 'Hīe ricседon' etc. Hosea viii. 4.

32, 21. — 'Hīe ƿonne etc. : Quos tamen internus iudex et provehit, et nescit : quia quos permittendo tolerat, profecto per iudicium reprobationis ignorat. The translator has in the last clause deviated from the sense of the original.

32, 23. — Ac ƿēah hī etc. Matt. vii. 22, 23; Luke xiii. 27.

32, 27. — 'Ðā hierdas' etc. : 'Ipsi pastores ignoraverunt intelligentiam' (Isa. lvi. 11). Quos rursum Dominus detestatur, dicens, 'Et tenentes legem nescierunt me' (Jer. ii. 8).

33, 1. — 'Sē ƿe God' etc. : 'Si quis autem ignorat, ignorabitur' (1 Cor. xiv. 38).

33, 7. — 'Gif sē blinda' etc. Matt. xv. 14.

33, 7. — sīen hīra ēagan etc. Ps. lxviii. 24 (lxix. 23). The application of these words is representative of Gregory's symbolic interpretation of Scripture; a more elaborate example is given in the next selection.

33, 28. — 'Gē fortrædon' etc. Ezek. xxxiv. 18, 19.

34, 9. — 'Yfle prēostas' etc. Hosea v. 1; ix. 8.

34, 18. — 'Sē ƿe ænigne' etc. Matt. xviii. 6.

- 35, 4. — Hū swiſe etc. Lib. II., cap. xi. of the original.
 35, 23. — ‘Donne ic cume’ etc. 1 Tim. iv. 13.
 35, 25. — ‘Lōca Dryhten’ etc. Ps. cxviii. 97 (cxix. 97).
 35, 28. — ‘Wyrc fēower hringas’ etc. Exod. xxv. 12 f.
 37, 15. — ‘Bēoſ simle gearwe’ etc. 1 Peter iii. 15.

VIII. THE VOYAGES OF OHTHERE AND WULFSTAN.

The Alfredian version of Orosius's Compendious History of the World, like all the Alfredian translations, abounds in variations from the original, in contractions, in expansions, and in original insertions. Specially important passages have been inserted in the first chapter of the first book.

“They consist of a complete description of all the countries in which the Teutonic tongue prevailed at Alfred's time, and a full narrative of the travels of two voyagers, which the king wrote down from their own lips. One of these, a Norwegian named Ohthere, had quite circumnavigated the coast of Scandinavia in his travels, and had even penetrated to the White Sea; the other, named Wulfstan, had sailed from Schleswig to Frische Haſf. The geographical and ethnographical details of both accounts are exceedingly interesting, and their style is attractive, clear, and concrete” (ten Brink).

Bosworth's edition of these voyages (1855) is valuable for its annotations, a map, and R. T. Hampson's “Essay on the Geography of King Alfred the Great.” The entire Anglo-Saxon version, with the Latin original, has been edited by Sweet for the Early English Text Society (1883). The Lauderdale MS. (ninth century) belongs to the Early West-Saxon period; the Cotton MS. (Tiberius B. i. Brit. Mus.), which is used to supply a gap in the text, belongs to the tenth century.

OHTHERE'S FIRST VOYAGE. — Ohthere set out from his home on the western coast of Norway in the northern part of ‘Hālgoland’ (which corresponds in part to modern Helgeland, the southern district of Nordland). He sailed northward along the coast, and on the sixth day doubled the North Cape; for the next four days his course was eastward, along ‘Terfinna land,’ after which he turned south into the White Sea (Cwēn Sæ), and in five days more reached the mouth of the river Dwina (ān micel ēa).

ONTHHERE'S SECOND VOYAGE. — Onthere afterwards sailed from 'Hålgoland' on a southern voyage; he followed the west and south coast of Norway; entering the Skager Rack, he first landed at 'Sciringeshēal,' a 'port' on the Bay of Christiania. Thence he sailed southward, through the Cattegat, along the southern coast of Sweden (Denemearc, i.e. the provinces of Halland, Scania or Schonen, in the south of Sweden), through The Sound. At first he had on his right Skager Rack (widsæ), then Jutland (Gotland), then Zealand (Sillende) and many islands (iglanda fela) to the south and south-west of Zealand. In five days he arrived at the Danish port Haddeby (æt Hæpum, at or near the present site of Schleswig).

WULFSTAN'S VOYAGE. — Wulfstan (perhaps a Dane) sailed in the Baltic Sea. Setting out from Schleswig (Hæpum), he coasted to the south of the islands Langeland (Langaland), Laaland (Læland), Falster, and Sconey (Scōnæg); proceeding in the main arm of the Baltic he passed south of Bornholm (Burgenda land), leaving also on his left the more remote Blekingen and Möre (Blēcīnga-æg, Mēore, provinces in the south of Sweden), and the islands Oeland (Eowland) and Gothland (Gotland). On his right he had Mecklenburg, Pomerania, etc. (Weonodland, the country of the Wends), until he reached the Frische Haff (Estmere). His voyage of seven days ended at the Drausensea (mere), on the shore of which stood 'Trūsō.'

39, 11. — Beormas. The country of the Permians (Biarmaland) was on the western coast of the White Sea, north and east of the river Dwina. "In the middle ages, the Scandinavian pirates gave the name Permia to the whole country between the White Sea and the Ural" (Bosworth, n. 42).

39, 13. — Terfinna land extended from the White Sea to the North Cape. "Belonging to Sweden is the tract inhabited by Laplanders called Trennes and Pihinieni, . . . In the Trennes we seem to have the Terfinns of Alfred" (Hampson).

40, 19. — wilde mōras. The 'waste lands' correspond to the present province of Norrland.

41, 1. — Cwēna land. "The country east and west of the Gulf of Bothnia, from Norway to the 'Cwēn' or White Sea, including Finmark on the north" (Bosworth, n. 36).

41, 15. — Īraland. That Ireland can here be meant, is highly improbable. Some editors have thought that the text should be emended to read Īsaland (or Īseland), 'Iceland'; then pā igland between Iceland and þissum lande (i.e. Britain) would be the islands of Faroe, Shetland, and Orkney. This is the simplest solution of the difficulty, but it has not removed all doubts. Rieger suggests the Shetlands, and Brenner (Englische Studien, IV., p. 457) argues in favor of Iæderen, in the southwest of Norway, and understands þissum lande to refer to the home of Ohthere. Brenner's view is not satisfactory.

42, 13. — Wislemūþan. An eastern branch of the Vistula (Wisle), the Nogat, on its way to the Frische Haff (Estmere) is joined, north of the Drausensea (mere), by the Elbing (Ilfiŋ) which then gives up its name. Wislemūþa does not therefore correspond to the Weichselmünde of the modern map.

42, 15. — The country of the Estas, or Esthonians, was to the east of the Vistula and extended north to the coast of the Baltic.

43, 13. — Ālēcgaŋ hit þonne forhwæge on ānre mīle etc. Bosworth has designed the following illustration of the plan of these races:

"The horsemen assemble five or six miles from the property, at d or e, and run towards c; the man who has the swiftest horse, coming first to 1 or c, takes the first and largest part. The man who has the horse coming second, takes part 2 or b, and so, in succession, till the least part, 6 or a, is taken."

IX. IT IS BETTER TO SUFFER AN INJURY THAN TO INFLICT ONE.

This extract is from the fourth book of the Boethius; see Notes to 'Orpheus and Eurydice.'

45, 2. — þis folc, i.e. the vulgus, just spoken of as indifferent to such reasoning (At vulgus ista non respicit); the 'folc' is again spoken of in this manner below (46, 7).

X. PROVIDENCE AND FATE.

This extract is also from the fourth book of the Boethius. It is a very free paraphrase of the original.

50, 9 f. — Swā swā on wānes eaxe etc. The passage in the original corresponding to this paragraph contains merely a simple figure of concentric spheres, for which the Anglo-Saxon translator has substituted the more ingenious and elaborate figure of the wheel.

XI. THE NATURE OF GOD.

The translator has here constructed a brief chapter of clear and simple statements on the basis of the much fuller and somewhat involved discussion at the close of the original.

XII. THE CONVERSION OF EDWIN.

Edwin (585 ?-633), son of Ælla, king of Deira, was the first Christian king of Northumbria (uniting Bernicia with his hereditary Deira), with York as the centre of his government. His eventful life as narrated by Bede embraces legendary incidents. Soon after his father's death in 588, Deira was conquered and governed by Æthelric, king of Bernicia; Edwin, in consequence, was compelled to live in exile from the third year of his age until the East-Anglian king, Rædwald, overcame Æthelfrith, son and successor of Æthelric, on the banks of the Idle (617), and regained for him his father's kingdom. After subduing Bernicia, Edwin extended his dominions to the north (Edinburgh, i.e. Eadwinesburh, is supposed to preserve his name), to the west and to the south, and within nine years became "overlord of every English kingdom, save Kent; and Kent was knit to him by his marriage with Æthelburh" (Green). He was ranked as the fifth Bretwalda.

Edwin's conversion to Christianity, after his political successes, is made to turn upon a promise which a mysterious visitor had exacted from him while in exile at the court of Rædwald. This visitor came upon him while sitting at night meditating upon his troubles. Edwin was brought to promise, upon condition of overcoming his enemies and securing his father's throne, to obey in all things the injunctions of his deliverer; whereupon the stranger laid his right hand on the head of Edwin, and said, 'When this sign shall come to thee, remember this hour and these words,' and then vanished as a spirit.

Edwin's Christian queen, Æthelburh, sister of Eadbald, king of Kent, came to her northern residence accompanied by Bishop Paulinus. How the king was finally persuaded to accept the doctrine observed by the queen and taught by Paulinus, is described in the following vivid and dramatic selection (Bede. Lib. II., cap. xii., xiii.). See further, Green's Making of England; Freeman's Old English History; and Bright's Early English Church History.

62, 9. — þæt tæcen. This is the sign which was to remind the king of the promise made to his mysterious visitor while in exile at the East-Anglian court.

63, 13. — þūhte ond gesewen wære: videretur.

64, 1. — þyslic mē is gesewen: Talis mihi videtur. This thoughtful and pathetic simile, in striking contrast to Cefi's sentiments of self-interest, is reproduced in Wordsworth's 16th Ecclesiastical Sonnet.

65, 30. — Godmundingahām. Goodmanham, some twenty-three miles from York, was an important seat of the heathen worship; it was here that Edwin had assembled his 'witan' to deliberate upon the new doctrine.

66, 4. — Ðā onfēng Eadwine etc. "The king caused a little wooden chapel to be hastily reared at York, on part of the ground now covered by the glorious Minster; and within its walls he went through the training of a catechumen, and received baptism on Easter-eve, April 11, 627. His nobles were baptized with him; and among the neophytes was his grand-niece Hilda, the future abbess of Whitby. Many people followed his example. It was the birth-day of the Northumbrian Church" (Bright).

66, 16. — mid ārlēasre cwale. Edwin was defeated and slain at the battle of Hatfield (633), where he encountered the Welsh king, Ceadwalla, and the Mercian king, Penda, who had combined their forces against him. The consequences of this defeat were disastrous to the Northumbrian State. Queen Æthelburh and Bishop Paulinus fled back to Kent, and heathendom revived in the North.

66, 17. — Ōswalde. Oswald restored the Northumbrian state, and reintroduced Christianity. See 'Ælfric's Life of King Oswald,' below (xvi.).

XIII. A BLICKLING HOMILY.

A collection of homilies contained in a unique manuscript at Blickling Hall, Norfolk, has come to be generally known as the Blickling Homilies, the title under which it was published by Morris for the Early English Text Society (1874-1880). A passage in the text (Vol. I., p. 119) incidentally fixes the date of the manuscript at 971. This date may, however, be due to the transcriber, at least it is not safe to infer that all the homilies belong to that year, though they were probably composed within a period not extending far back from that time; "they were beyond question a product of thought created by Dunstan, Æthelwold, and their adherents" (ten Brink).

One of the homilist's favorite themes is the near approach of the end of the world, a subject that so filled the mind of the people at the close of the tenth century.

The student is now introduced to the prose writings of the late West-Saxon period, — a direct continuation of the literary activity begun by Alfred the Great.

69, 23. — on ūrne Drihten etc. The text should probably read on God and on ūrne Drihten Hælende Crist, his ƿone æcendan Sunu. The error is obviously due to the scribe.

XIV. ÆLFRIC'S HOMILY ON THE ASSUMPTION OF ST. JOHN THE APOSTLE.

Ælfric is altogether the most important writer of the late West-Saxon period. He was born, probably in Wessex, about the year 955. At the age of sixteen he was already an inmate of Bishop Æthelwold's monastery at Winchester, where, as pupil, deacon, and priest, he continued to the year 987. He was then sent to Cernel in Dorsetshire to instruct in the Benedictine Code the monks of the monastery lately founded by the royal thane Æthelmær. During this mission of two years, Ælfric formed the resolution to make translations from the Latin into the vernacular, with the view to correct and improve popular Christian teaching. Returning to Winchester (889 or 890), he wrote his first series of forty homilies, to be used by the clergy in the course of a year's administration; a second series of equal scope followed in 993-994. As an aid to the study of Latin, he wrote an Anglo-Saxon Latin Grammar (995), a topically classified glossary, and an interlinear Colloquium; he also compiled physico-astronomical treatises. The "Lives of Saints" was written about the year 996, and then (997-998) followed translations of portions of the Old Testament. The "Canons of Ælfric," a pastoral and liturgical tract, was also written about this time. A translation of Alcuin's "Handbook upon Genesis" may be assigned to the year 1000.

Æthelmær afterwards founded a Benedictine monastery at Ensham (Oxfordshire), and it was here that Ælfric, in 1005, was installed as abbot, — the highest office attained by him; he held the abbacy on a life tenure. Henceforth his writings were of an occasional nature, but they were all directed to the same end of strengthening the discipline of the Church and of elevating the religious culture of the people. He translated the De Consuetudine Monachorum of his old master Æthelwold, and the Hexameron of St. Basil. A homily on Judith and a translation of the book of Esther are followed by a treatise on the Old and New Testaments (before 1012). The entire list of Ælfric's writings, in Anglo-Saxon and in Latin, has not yet been accurately determined. Treatises on the celibacy of the clergy, pastoral letters, separate homilies, a Latin Life of Æthelwold, etc., augment the products of his industrious pen. Two pastoral letters, written for Wulfstan of York, about the year 1014, are the last of his works that can be approximately dated. It is probable that he was still alive and abbot at Ensham in 1020. His death is placed between 1020 and 1025.

Ælfric's career is conspicuous in its relation to the reform of Dunstan and Æthelwold, and his writings mark a culmination in prose style. His language is always clear, and when not forced into an artificial alliterative mould, it is flexible and forcible.

The double cycle of Ælfric's Homilies is published in an edition of two volumes by Thorpe (London, 1843-1846). The homily for St. John's Day, Dec. 27th, is the fourth of the first series.

84, 10-11. — sunnanūhtan, 'early Sunday morning,' just before dawn. — hancrēde, 'cock-crowing'; here the last division of the night, just at dawn. — undern, at the third hour of the morning, i.e. nine o'clock (mid-morning).

XV. ÆLFRIC'S HOMILY ON ST. GREGORY THE GREAT.

This homily for St. Gregory's Day, March 12th, has, since its first publication by Miss Elizabeth Elstob in 1709, been regarded with special interest. It is the ninth homily of Ælfric's second series.

86, 1-2. — on Ūisum andwerdan dæge. Pope Gregory died on the 12th of March, 604. The death of a saint was commemorated by the Church as his true birth, his entrance into the life of bliss.

86, 7. — 'Historia Anglorum.' The History of Bede is the homilist's chief authority. — Ælfric bears testimony to the tradition that Alfred translated Bede's History.

86, 15. — Gordīānus, and Fēlix etc. Gregory's father was a rich Roman of senatorial rank; his great-great-grandfather (his fifta fæder: Lat. atavus) was Pope Felix (526-530), "the third or fourth of that name according to different computations; probably, therefore, the word atavus [Bede, Lib. II., cap. i.] should strictly be proavus, the father of the grandfather" (Moberly).

87, 6. — Grēgōrius is Grēcisc nama etc. The name is derived from the root of ἐγρησκω. Paulus Diaconus interpreted it by vigilator seu vigilans (Elstob). 'Vigilantius' is curiously translated as the neuter comparative by 'Wacolre.'

87, 21. — þæt seofofte etc. The seventh monastery founded by Gregory was "dedicated to St. Andrew, on the site of his own house near the church of St. John and St. Paul at Rome" (Barnby). Here he himself lived as a Regular (regollice, according to the Benedictine rule of the institution) in submission to the government of the abbot.

88, 3. — mid pællenum gyrlum etc. At the age of thirty, Gregory held the high office of prætor urbanus; this description of rich apparel probably refers to his robe of state.

88, 11. — singāllice untrumnyssa. Gregory speaks of bodily afflictions "in his Epistle to Leander, bishop of Sevil" (Elstob).

88, 14. — þā undergeat sē pāpa etc. In 577 Pope Benedict I. (574-578) ordained Gregory one of the seven deacons of Rome. Under Pope Pelagius (578-590) he served as papal apocrisiarius or responsalis at Constantinople; this diplomatic mission kept him at the imperial court from 578 (?) to 585.

88, 22. — cȳpecnihtas. William Thorne, monk of St. Augustine's, Canterbury, specifies the number of these boys: "Vidit in foro Romano tres pueros Anglicos lactei candoris venales." X. Script. p. 1757. "The date of Gregory's meeting with the English slaves at Rome is fixed between 585 and 588 by the fact that after his long stay at Constantinople he returned to Rome in 585 or 588. . . . On the other hand, Ælla, whom the slaves owned as their king, died in 588" (Green, The Making of England, p. 216, note 2).

90, 8. — mannwealm. Miss Elstob noticed that Gregory of Tours (Hist. Lib. X.) has an account of this pestilence, which resulted from the overflowing of the Tiber.

90, 10. — Pelāgium. Pelagius II. died Feb. 8, 590.

90, 18. — gefædera. While at Constantinople, Gregory is said to have stood sponsor to one of the sons of the Emperor Maurice; he therefore held the relation of compater (cf. 20, 12) to the Emperor himself. The homilist is also, apparently, indebted for this detail to Gregory of Tours.

91, 3. — tō pāpan gehālgod wurde. The day of Gregory's accession was Sept. 3, 590.

92, 2. — 'uton āhebban' etc. Lamentations iii. 41.

92, 5. — 'Nylle ic' etc. Ezek. xxxiii. 11.

92, 20. — Clypa mē etc. Ps. xlix. 15 (l. 15).

93, 1. — seofonfealde lētānias. On this occasion Gregory instituted the 'sevenfold litanies' (Litania Major), or processions, afterwards observed by the Church on St. Mark's Day, April 15.

93, 20-21. — Augustinus, Mellitus, etc. Augustine (died in 604 or 605) became the first Archbishop of Canterbury (cf. 96, 2); he was succeeded by Laurentius, who was succeeded by Mellitus (Bishop of London), who was succeeded by Iustus (Bishop of Rochester). Pētrus became the first Abbot of the Monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul at Canterbury, and Iōhannes succeeded him.

94, 15. — On vām dagum etc. The missionaries arrived at the court of Æthelberht, king of Kent, in 597. The king, as afterwards in the case of Edwin, had a Christian queen; Bertha, daughter of Chariberht, king of Paris, with her Frankish chaplain, Bishop Liudhard, worshipped at Canterbury, in a little church called St. Martin's.

96, 2. — Ethērium. It is supposed that the homilist here follows Bede (Lib. I., cap. xxvii.) in erroneously naming Etherius; Augustine was consecrated 'Archbishop of the English' on the 16th of November (597 ?) at Arles, by the archbishop Vergilius, not by Etherius, it is contended, who was at that time the archbishop of Lyons.

XVI. ÆLFRIC'S LIFE OF KING OSWALD.

Oswald (c. 604-642) was the second son of Edwin's sister and of King Æthelfrith. His father having fallen in the battle of the Idle (617), he took refuge among the northern Celts. After Edwin's death, Osric, a son of Ælla's brother, Ælfric, ruled Deira, and Eanfrith, Oswald's older brother, was placed on the throne of Bernicia. Both kings threw off Christianity. "The reigns of these two kings lasted one miserable year, a year whose shame was never forgotten among the Englishmen of the north" (Green). These kings fell before Ceadwalla, and Oswald came from his retreat to assume the leadership of his people. He at once collected a small force, with which he met and defeated Ceadwalla at Heavenfield (635). Ceadwalla was himself slain in this battle, "and the fall of this great hero of the British race left the Englishmen of Bernicia supreme in the north" (Green). Oswald became one of the greatest of Northumbrian kings, ruling over both Bernicia and Deira, and in large measure restoring the political work of Edwin. Having been converted to Christianity while in exile at Hii, off the western coast of Scotland, where the Irish Columba had set up a mission, the king at once began to labor for the conversion of his people. He called upon the mission at Hii for preachers, and Aidan came and "fixed his bishop's stool or see in 635 on the coast of Northumbria, in the island peninsula of Lindisfarne. Thence, from a monastery which gave to the spot its after name of Holy Island, preachers poured forth over the heathen realm" (Green). It was thus that Christianity, first introduced into Northumbria by Paulinus of Augustine's mission in the south, was now reintroduced by way of the Irish-Scotch mission of the north. The beneficent reign of Oswald is in many of its features a striking parallel to that of Edwin. Both kings became the nucleus of popular legend. Oswald reigned as Bretwalda, and finally fell in battle against Penda at Maserfield, on the 5th of August, 642.

Ælfric's chief source for the Life of King Oswald was Bede's Ecclesiastical History (Lib. III.). The text is obtained from Sweet's Anglo-Saxon Reader, where it was published for the first time. A volume (in two parts, not including the Life of Oswald) of Ælfric's "Lives of Saints" has been edited by Skeat for the Early English Text Society (1881-1885).

98, 1. — Augustinus, sent by Gregory the Great on his mission to England.

98, 8. — and twēgen his æftergengan, namely Osric and Eanfrith.

98, 14. — Ōswald þā ārārde āne rōde etc. According to Bede, the king supported the cross with his own hands while his men fastened it in the earth.

99, 6. — sum man etc. Bede is specific, and says it was a man named Bothelm, one of the brethren of the church at Hexham.

99, 12. — Heofenfeld, 'Heavenfield,' is the name afterwards given to the place where this battle was fought; it was near Hexham, but has not been exactly identified.

101, 9. — Hē fulworhte on Eferwic etc., cf. 66, 17.

101, 19. — On þām ylcan timan etc. Soon after the battle of Heavenfield, the conversion of the West-Saxons was begun by Birinus, who was sent by Pope Honorius. The king, Cynegils, was baptized in the presence of Oswald, who had come to the West-Saxon court to receive the daughter of Cynegils in marriage. Birinus, the first bishop of the West-Saxons, was afterwards established at Dorchester on the Thames.

102, 28. — Ōswig, 'Oswiu,' the third son of Æthelfrith, in 642 became king of Bernicia only (Oswine, the son of Osric, ascended the throne of Deira); after some years, however, he too gained the sovereignty of the entire Northumbrian realm.

103, 7. — His brōþor dohtor. This was Oswin's daughter Osthryth, queen of Mercia.

105, 33. — Eft sē hālga Cūðberht etc. This vision of Cuthbert is here somewhat abruptly introduced, though the historic connection of events is close enough. Aidan was grieved at his favorite king Oswine's fall before Oswiu, and died soon after.

XVII. ÆLFRIC'S PREFACE TO GENESIS.

In this preface we catch an interesting view of Ælfric as the earnest single-minded teacher of the people. He was with difficulty persuaded to translate the Genesis, fearing that a popular knowledge of the polygamy under the old law might have a disturbing influence.

Ælfric's Old-Testament translations are edited by Grein: Bibliothek der Angelsächsischen Prosa, Cassel and Göttingen, 1872.

107, 1. — Ælfric munuc grēt Æðelwærd. grēt, the third person of formal greeting; cf. note to 26, 1, 2. — 'Æðelweard' was a noble ealdorman, descended from the house of Alfred the Great; he was a friend and patron of Ælfric, and himself, though a layman, the author of a Latin chronicle.

108, 7. — sum ððer man. Nothing is known of this translator, whose fragmentary version, it is assumed, Ælfric touched up and joined to his own. See ten Brink.

XVIII. THE LEGEND OF ST. ANDREW.

The only complete copy of this prose legend is preserved in MS. 198 of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; the introductory portion is also found in the Blickling Homily MS. It was first published by C. W. Goodwin, The Anglo-Saxon Legends of St. Andrew and St. Veronica, Cambridge, 1851, and afterwards by Morris, The Blickling Homilies, Part II., London, 1876. There is also an Anglo-Saxon poetic version of this legend (Grein, Vol. II., p. 9 f.; Grein-Wülker, Vol. II., p. 1 f.; Baskervill, Andreas: A Legend of St. Andrew, Boston, 1885). A common source establishes a relation between these two versions; this source is a Latin original, in prose, of which only a few fragments have been found (Zupitza, Zeitschrift für deutsches Alterthum, Vol. XXX., p. 175 f., and Lipsius, Ergänzungsheft, p. 29). The Greek version of the legend (from which, however, the Anglo-Saxon versions vary in many details) is published in Tischendorf's Acta Apostolorum Apocrypha, Leipsic, 1851, p. 104 f. The legends of the apostles are exhaustively treated by Lipsius, Die apokryphen Apostelgeschichten und Apostellegenden, Braunschweig, 1883-1890. The Anglo-Saxon prose version is assigned to the tenth century; there is no clue to its authorship.

113, 5. — Marmadonia. The scene of the principal incidents of this legend, 'Marmadonia' (or 'Mermedonia'), a city among the anthropophagi, is supposed to be the Μυρμηκίων, or Μυρμηκία, in the Crimea (Chersonesus Taurica), mentioned by Strabo (Lipsius, Vol. I., p. 604).

115, 7. — Achāla here denotes a region on the eastern coast of the Black Sea; in some forms of the legend it is confounded with Achaia in Greece (Lipsius, Vol. I., p. 609 f.).

116, 1. — Sē hālīga Andrēas etc. Immediately preceding these words in MS. B., the following fragment of the Latin original is inserted: Tunc Sanctus Andreas surgens mane abiit ad mare cum discipulis suis, et uidit nauiculam in litore, et intra naue sedentes tres uiros.

118, 1. — Sumre tīde etc., cf. 3, 29 f.

121, 16. — ēastdæle, i.e. of the Black Sea, although the local traditions of Sinope (on the southern shore) place the mount (dūne), on which Peter is found, on an island near that city (Lipsius, Vol. I., p. 611).

122, 10. — stræl. The poetic version (l. 1191) has þū dēofles stræl. Zupitza regards stræl as the rendering of sagitta (or telum), which in the Latin copy was occasioned by erroneously giving to Beāla (Belial) the meaning of βελος.

127, 10. — bisceope. In the poetic version (l. 1653) this bishop is named Platan, i.e. Πλάτων of the legend of St. Matthew.

XIX. THE HARROWING OF HELL.

Among once popular literary sources the apocryphal Gospel of Nicodemus holds an important place. Christ's Descent into Hell was a favorite theme in Anglo-Saxon poetry, and afterwards in the Mystery Plays of the early drama. A sketch of the relations of this Gospel to the literature of western Europe is given by Wülker: Das Evangelium Nicodemi in der abendländischen Literatur, Paderborn, 1872. The Apocryphal Gospels (Latin and Greek) are edited by Tischendorf, Leipsic, 1853; recent English translations are by B. Harris Cowper, London, 1867, and Alex. Walker [Ante-Nicene Christian Lib.], Edinburgh, 1870.

The Anglo-Saxon prose version of this apocryphal book belongs, probably, to the eleventh century. The orthography of the best MS. (Camb. Univ. Lib. II. 2. 11) is characteristic of the Late West-Saxon dialect at least half a century after Ælfric's time. The entire version is printed in Heptateuchus, Liber Job, et Evangelium Nicodemi; Anglo-Saxonice, etc., edited by Thwaites, Oxford, 1698.

The substance of the narrative introductory to the extract here given is as follows: Joseph assures the high priests Annas and Caiaphas that Jesus did not only rise from the dead, but that he also raised many others with himself, among whom are the two sons of Simeon, named Karinus and Leucius; these can now be seen at Arimathea. "Then the chief priests, Annas and Caiaphas, arose, and Joseph, and Nicodemus, and Gamaliel, and others with them, and went to Arimathea, and found those whom Joseph had said." Karinus and Leucius are brought to Jerusalem and led into the temple, where they are adjured to reveal the mysteries they have seen and heard; in compliance they sit down and write.

129, 17. — þā ic cwæð etc. Isa. ix. 1, 2.

130, 5. — þone þe ic bæc etc. Luke ii. 28 f.

130, 13. — ic eom Iōhannes etc. Matt. iii. 1 f.; Mark i. 2 f.

130, 17. — Geræce þȳnum bearnum etc. How this legend of Seth was afterwards connected with the legends of the cross may be seen in Legends of the Holy Rood, edited by Morris for the Early English Text Society, 1871, p. xii. f.

131, 17. — 'and mȳn sǣwl' etc. Mark xiv. 34.

133, 15. — "Tollite portas" etc. Ps. xxiii. 7 (xxiv. 7).

133, 27. — and þā hæftinga gehealdað etc. It is possible that hæftinga may have the sense of 'captivity'; cf. Ps. lxvii. 19 (lxviii. 18), cepisti captivitatem.

134, 3. — 'Andettað' etc. Ps. cvi. 15 f. (cvii. 15 f.).

134, 9. — þæt dēade mēn etc. Isa. xxvi. 19.

134, 25. — þæt sē sylfa Drihten etc. Ps. ci. 20, 21 (cii. 19, 20).

137, 24. — Singað Dryhtne etc. Ps. xcvi. 1, 2 (xcviii. 1, 2).

138, 15. — ac wyt sceolon etc. 1 Thess. iv. 17; Rev. xi. 3-12; 1 John ii. 18, iv. 3.

139, 3. — Ealā Dryhten etc. Luke xxiii. 42, 43.

141, 1. — grēt. The third person of formal greeting (cf. 26, 1).

XX. CÆDMON'S GENESIS: THE OFFERING OF ISAAC.

Anglo-Saxon literature first flourished in the Anglian territory (north of the Thames). In this first period, which culminated about the middle of the eighth century, the greater part of Anglo-Saxon poetry was produced. However, these Anglian productions (except in the case of a few fragments, like the Hymn of Cædmon, see p. 201) are preserved only in copies made in the south during the tenth and eleventh centuries. By repeated transcription these poems were brought into more or less exact conformity with the later language of the south, and therefore now represent no dialect in its purity, but a combination of chiefly Early and Late West-Saxon with a residuum of Anglian forms. The case resembles that of the Homeric poems, which are in the Ionic dialect with an admixture of Aeolic forms surviving, as is conjectured, from the dialect in which the poems were originally composed. An almost complete collection of Anglo-Saxon poetry is contained in Grein's Bibliothek der angelsächsischen Poesie, Göttingen and Cassel, 1857 f., re-edited by Wülker, Cassel, 1881 f.

Although the poems preserved in MS. Junius, XI., Bodl. Lib. correspond in character to Bede's description (see p. 11) of Cædmon's compositions and were therefore once all attributed to Cædmon, criticism has shown that these biblical poems are the work of different authors. The "Genesis" alone (after eliminating a long interpolation, ll. 235-851) is still claimed for Cædmon (see ten Brink, Appendix A).

The Episode of the Offering of Isaac has the additional interest of being one of the most pathetic and best-handled themes in the Mystery Plays of the early drama.

142, 10. — hrincg þæs hēan landes, 'the (elevated) border of the highland'; Bouterwek's emendation hrycg 'ridge' is not required.

142, 11. — gegærwan, more strictly gegærwan. Anglian.

143, 1. — Waldend (Wäldend). Anglian; S. 158, 2.

143, 17. — hēa dūne. Rhythmically the contracted form hēa is here dissyllabic.

143, 18. — Aldor (Āldor). Anglian.

144, 3. — gedæde. Anglian; S. 429, n. 1.

144, 8. — hēan is rhythmically dissyllabic; cf. 143, 17.

144, 16 f. — fýre sęcancan etc. It is probably best to read, as Bouterwek prefers, fýr gesęcancan, 'to bathe or quench the fire with the blood of his kin,' though gesęcancan (or sęcancan) in this sense is not found elsewhere. On the other hand it is possible that the verb should be swęcancan 'molest' (Hart); retaining fýre, the next half-line might then be changed to his mægcs drēor, 'with fire to molest (consume) the blood of his kin.' Körner suggests fýre sellan mægcs drēor (cf. "Exodus," 402); but mægcs drēor is rhythmically incomplete.

145, 10 f. — brynegield onhrēad etc. This disputed passage may be translated, 'He adorned (reddened) the sacrifice, the reeking altar, with the ram's blood.'

XXI. THE BATTLE OF BRUNANBURH.

Æthelstan, grandson of Alfred the Great, reigned from 895 to 941. He was king not only of the West-Saxons and of Mercia, but by a brilliant execution of the policy of his father, Eadweard, he added Northumbria to his realm, and "thus became immediate king of all the Teutonic races in Britain, and superior lord of all the Celtic principalities" (Freeman). The poem on the Battle of Brunanburh commemorates the most famous battle of his reign. In the year 937, Anlaf (or Olaf), a son of the former Northumbrian Danish king Siht-ric, came again from Ireland and stirred up the Northumbrian Danes to another rebellion against their West-Saxon king. "The men of the northern Danelaw found themselves backed not only by their brethren from Ireland, but by the mass of states around them, by the English of Bernicia, by the Scots under Constantine, by the Welshmen of Cumbria or Strath-Clyde" (Green). Æthelstan and his brother Eadmund marched with their forces to the north, and in a victorious battle ended the rebellion. The site of Brunanburh has not been certainly determined; Bosworth locates it "about five miles southwest of Durham, or on the plain between the river Tyne and the Browney" (Bosworth-Toller, Dictionary; for other opinions, see Green, The Conquest of England, p. 254, note 1).

"The poem does not seem to have been written by one who saw the battle. At least we learn from it no more in substance than might have been put down in a short entry of the Chronicle. The poem lacks the epic perception and direct power of the folk-song, as well as invention. The patriotic enthusiasm, however, upon which it is borne, the lyrical strain which pervades it, yield their true effect. The rich resources derived from the national epos are here happily utilised, and the pure versification and brilliant style of the whole stir our admiration" (ten Brink).

This battle-piece is the most important of the poetic insertions in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicles. The manuscripts furnish many variant readings; the text here given represents the poem in its generally accepted form.

146, 12.—feld dennode etc., ‘the field became slippery with the blood of warriors.’ This interpretation of dennode is merely conjectural.

147, 1.—Myrce. The Mercians belonged to the forces of Æthelstan.

147, 31.—on Dinges mere has not been satisfactorily explained. Dinges, as a proper name, is very doubtful; the variant readings are dynges, dyniges, dinnes. See Glossary.

148, 4 f.—Lēton him behindan etc. In a conventional figure of the poets the raven, eagle and wolf are attendants of the battle-field; cf. 152, 23–24.

XXII. THE BATTLE OF MALDON.

The supremacy of the West-Saxon kings was broken in the disastrous reign of Æthelred. The Northmen invaded England anew, and ultimately placed a Danish king upon the English throne. The invaders met the bravest resistance at the Battle of Maldon. In 991 they attacked the eastern coasts of England “seemingly with the intention of making a settlement. This seems to have been a Norwegian expedition; the leaders were Justin and Guthmund, sons of Steitan, and there seems every reason to believe that Olaf Trygvesson himself was present also” (Freeman). They first plundered Ipswich, and then proceeded into Essex; the East-Saxon ealdorman Brihtnoth promptly collected his forces, and gave the invaders battle on the banks of the Blackwater (then called Panta) near Maldon. “The town lies on a hill; immediately at its base flows one branch of the river, while another, still crossed by a mediæval bridge, flows at a little distance to the north. The Danish ships seem to have lain in the branch nearest to the town, and their crews must have occupied the space between the two streams, while Brihtnoth came to the rescue from the north. He seems to have halted on the spot now occupied by the church of Heybridge, having both streams between him and the town” (Freeman).

The poet has described this battle with the fidelity of an eye-witness. From the minuteness of details it is to be inferred that the poem was composed soon after the event; these details relate exclusively to the English side, even the names of those in command of the enemy being, apparently, unknown to the poet. In dramatic incident and in patriotic fervor this poem is unsurpassed in Anglo-Saxon literature; it also furnishes a graphic and effective picture of a lord and his followers united by the spirit of the comitatus.

The brave ealdorman Brihtnoth was also distinguished as a liberal patron of monastic foundations, especially of Ely and Ramsey. After his fall at Maldon, the enemy having carried off his head as a trophy, his body was taken to Ely and there buried, with a ball of wax to supply the loss of the head. His widow Æthelflæd is said to have wrought his deeds in tapestry.

The only manuscript copy of this poem (Cotton Otho, A. xii.) was destroyed by fire in 1731, but Hearne had transcribed and published it in 1726 (Johannis Glastoniensis Chronica, Oxford). The text is incomplete both at the beginning and at the end, but it is probable that not more than a few lines have thus been lost.

149, 2. — hwæne here means 'a certain one,' though it has wrongly been supposed to be equivalent to gehwilcne, 'each' (cf. 153, 15).

149, 4. — hlægan tō handum etc., 'to be active and of good courage' (cf. 149, 13-14, and the Finnsburg Fragment, l. 10 f.).

149, 5. — Offan mæg, the 'kinsman of Offa,' who is the first to respond to the call of his lord; Offa himself is also mentioned in the poem.

149, 6. — sē eorl, i.e. Brihtnoth himself, to whom alone the poet applies the title eorl. — yrhðo, 'cowardice' on the part of his men; some editors prefer to read yrmðo, 'dishonor' at the hands of the invaders.

149, 7. — hē lēt him þā of handon etc. hē (i.e. Offan mæg) abandons the sport of fowling with his favorite (lēofne) hawk to join the campaign.

149, 11. — Ēadrīc, another faithful retainer. Ettmüller, erroneously, would introduce the line by ac (for ēac) and identify Ēadrīc with Offan mæg.

149, 12-13. — forð beran gār tō gūpe, 'to go armed to war.' beran is frequent in expressions of military motion; cf. 151, 10, 15; 152, 16, etc.

150, 7. — þær hē on ofre stōd. hē refers to ærende.

150, 19. — ūs. Reflexive dative with a verb of motion.

150, 25. — hī willað eow tō gafole gāras syllan. There is a close parallelism to this reply in Marlowe's Jew of Malta, Act II. sc. 2:

GOVERNOR. So will we fight it out; come, let's away:
 Proud, daring Calymath, instead of gold,
We'll send thee bullets wrapt in smoke and fire:
 Claim tribute where thou wilt, we are resolved,
 Honour is bought with blood and not with gold.

In the very year of this battle, however, Æthelred afterwards began the fatal practice of buying off the invaders with money.

151, 17. — sē æschere, i.e. the forces of the Northmen, the 'ship-army'; this unusual epithet was apparently occasioned by the requirement of the alliteration.

151, 22. — hæleða hlēo, i.e. Brihtnoth.

151, 27. — þær stōdon mid Wulfstāne etc. Wulfstan was the efficient leader of his kin (cāfne mid his cyne) to which, apparently, Ælfhere and Maccus belonged; his son, Wulfmær, is mentioned farther on (154, 11).

152, 9. — Byrhtelmes bearn, i.e. Brihtnoth.

152, 23-24. — hrēmmas wundon etc. Cf. 148, 4 f.

152, 30. — Wulfmær, the son of Brihtnoth's sister.

153, 7. — his ðeoden, i.e. Brihtnoth; cf. 154, 14.

153, 21. — sūþerne gār, 'a southern dart,' i.e. a dart from the south; the enemy were to the south, hence this epithet, apparently coined for the sake of the alliteration.

154, 28. — For the missing half-line Körner suggests: hlēoðrode eorl.

155, 11. — Oddan bearn, 'the sons of Odda,' i.e. Godric, Godrine (or, as some editors prefer, Godwine), and Godwig.

156, 2. — ōðer twēga, 'one of two things.'

156, 4. — Ælfrices. It is possible that this was Ælfric the ealdorman of Mercia (Freeman, History of the Norman Conquest, Vol. I., p. 272, note 4, and Green, Conquest of England, p. 372 f.).

157, 13. — Stūrmere, "a lake or fen in Essex" (Freeman); more probably the mouth or estuary of the Stour (Körner).

158, 20. — Gaddes mæg, i.e. Offa. Körner believes that Gaddes is a Danish name and that the poet therefore in this single instance names one of the enemy. This opinion is not to be accepted, nor is it necessary, as Zerniel suggests, to transpose the order of lines 20 and 21.

159, 3. — ær him Wigelines bearn. him, reflexive dative; Wigelines bearn, i.e. Wistān (< Wigstān), Wigelin (or perhaps Wigeling), being another name for þurstān.

XXIII. THE WANDERER.

The poem entitled the "Wanderer" is representative of the lyrics produced in the first (Anglian) period of Anglo-Saxon literature. The dominant note is that of sadness. The poet is full of the sorrows of bereavement and of exile; he laments the death of protectors and of friends, the passing away of the joys of comradeship; his delusive dreams of past happiness deepen by contrast the gloom of the desolate reality wrought by death, change and devastation. But although a man cannot withstand fate, he can in distress practise the restraint and resignation of the true hero. In the "Battle of Maldon" the relation between a lord and his men is seen under the severest test; the "Wanderer," by the indirect touches of longing recollection, draws a picture of the comitatus in the joyous hall of the gift-dispensing lord.

The authorship of the poem is undetermined; there is no reason for assigning it to Cynewulf.

161, 4. — minne wisse is perhaps best translated by 'may show (witan) favor.' There is difficulty with the unusual word minne. Thorpe first suggested minne (for MS. mine), and Sievers, on metrical grounds, has accepted it; Kluge, however, substitutes mildse, and Holthausen suggests mildne. Sweet, in violation of metrical requirements, retains mine (or myne), to which he gives the meaning 'memory, love.'

161, 8. — lēofra geholena. Holthausen (Anglia, Vol. XIII., p. 357) proposes as a better reading, lēofra ge holdra, 'of dear and faithful ones.'

162, 28. — fugel. According to Thorpe fugel is here used figuratively to denote 'ship'; cf. the simile in the Beowulf (l. 218), flota fāmighēals fugle gelicost, 'the foamy-necked ship most like to a bird.'

163, 1. — ælda (ǣlda), Anglian; S. 159, 2.

XXIV. THE PHOENIX.

The first part of the Anglo-Saxon "Phoenix" (ll. 1-380) is an adaptation or paraphrase of a Latin poem attributed to Lactantius Firmianus (4th century). In Teuffel's History of Latin Literature (5th ed., 1890), the much disputed question as to the authorship of the Latin poem is confidently decided in favor of Lactantius. The Anglo-Saxon poet has added a second part (ll. 381 to the end) in which the myth of the phoenix (in a twofold application, to the righteous and then to Christ himself) is made to symbolize the Christian doctrine of the resurrection. This allegorical portion is apparently not based on any literary source, though there is some resemblance to passages in the writings of Ambrosius, and in one instance perhaps a direct influence of Bede's Commentary on Job. The entire poem therefore affords the material for a twofold study of the author's workmanship: his method of translation and adaptation can be compared with the character of his original composition. See Gaebler, Anglia, Vol. III., p. 488 f., and Ebert, Allgemeine Geschichte der Literatur des Mittelalters im Abendlande, Vol. III., p. 73 f.

The "Phoenix" belongs to the Anglian period of poetry, but it is almost certainly not to be attributed to Cynewulf. In grace and simplicity of style, in the elaboration and clearness of figure, in lyric beauty and in richness of description, this poem must be classed with the best poetic productions of Anglo-Saxon times. The originality and the feeling of the poet are particularly manifest in his transformation of a cold and artificial prototype into a poem of warmth and beauty.

165, 1-6. — Hæbbe ic gefrugen etc. The opening formula, 'I have heard,' is characteristic of Anglo-Saxon poems. Even the first few lines reveal the poet's free treatment of his original in eliminating notions foreign to the Anglo-Saxon mind, and in recasting the poem in a Christian mould.

166, 4. — hlæonað. Sievers (Beiträge, Vol. X., p. 502), to meet the requirements of the verse, suggests hlēonað, deriving a verb hlēonian, 'to prosper,' from the noun hlēonað, 'shelter.'

166, 12. — sunbearo lixeð. — sunbearo, 'sunny grove,' corresponds to solis nemus (Lact. l. 11), but there is an avoidance of the heathen notion of the Sun-god (Gaebler). — lixeð. It is a mark of the Anglian origin of the poem that the rhythm requires the full personal ending -eð (so also at lines 39, 61, 80, 89, 99, 110, 144, 187, etc.); a West-Saxon poet would have made free use of the syncopated forms. S. 358, n. 1.

166, 18-28. — nē him lig sceðfeð etc. In this passage, corresponding to Lact. ll. 11-14, the final destruction of the world and Noah's flood are substituted for the adventure of Phaeton and the flood of Deucalion (Gaebler).

168, 4. — fæger. The rhythm of Anglo-Saxon verse often requires fæger (Sievers); so here and at lines 125, 182, 232, 307.

168, 5. — Fēnix, rhythmically always Fenix (Sievers); see lines 218, 646.

168, 11. — glædum. Sievers has observed that in the rhythm of the "Phoenix" the primary syllable of this adjective is always long; see lines 289, 303, 593.

168, 15. — āhyded. The full pp. ending -ed with verbs in -t, -d, is another mark of the Anglian dialect; see lines 96, 181, 231, 418, 491, 550. S. 402.

169, 27. — swanes feðre. In attributing music not to the 'dying swan' (olor moriens, Lact. l. 49), but to the 'swan's feathers,' the poet employs a form of the myth which is also found in No. viii. of the Anglo-Saxon Riddles (Dietrich).

170, 26. — þegn and þeow þeodne mærum. In characteristic variation from the original, the Anglo-Saxon poet introduces the relationship of the comitatus.

173, 15 f. — sumes onlice etc. (cf. Lact. l. 107 f.). This expanded figure is particularly noteworthy, since similes are very unusual in Anglo-Saxon poetry.

174, 8. — nihte. The substitution of niht, the earlier form of the dat. (S. 284, n. 1), will restore the true rhythm (Sievers).

175, 6. — sunnan segn, 'the sign of the sun' = 'the sun,' just as the sun is also called tācen (l. 96) and bēacen (l. 107); the same figure is merely varied in expression to suit the alliteration.

179, 8. — tōðas idge. It is highly probable that tōðas (see the variants) is here correct, but idge is very doubtful. Hart, on the analogy of idæges (or igldæges), suggests idæge, 'that same day.' It is also possible that idge is the remnant of an adjective like grædige, 'greedy.'

184, 6 f. — Iobes gleddinga! etc. Job xxix. 18: In nidulo meo moriar, et sicut palma multiplicabo dies. Gaebler notices that Bede, in his Commentary on Job, follows the Jewish tradition in interpreting palma as denoting the phoenix. It may therefore perhaps be inferred that the poet knew Bede's work.

185, 20. — hrēmige, rhythmically hrēmge (Sievers).

186, 25. — sȳ. Rhythmically siē (dissyllabic) is required (Sievers).

APPENDIX II.

ANGLO-SAXON VERSIFICATION.¹

ANGLO-SAXON poetry is composed in a kind of blank-verse, in long unrimed (but alliterative) and ungrouped (i.e. stichic) lines.

A. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

1. Every line consists of two parts, the first half-line, and the second half-line; these half-lines are separated by a cæsura and united by alliteration (i.e. initial rime; end-rime occurs occasionally, but merely as an incidental ornament).

2. Every half-line has two rhythmical stresses, or accents, and consequently two rhythmical measures, or "feet"; it is a structural unit and has a scansion of its own, independent of that of its complementary half-line. In contrast to the second half-line, the first half-line is usually more expanded in form.

3. The "foot" (or measure) in its simplest form consists of two parts, an accented and an unaccented part (arsis and thesis). However, two additional forms are employed: a foot of one part only, the arsis; and a foot of three parts, of which one is the arsis (having the chief rhythmical stress), another has a secondary stress, and the third is unaccented, being the true thesis.

4. The arsis (or rhythmical stress) requires a long syllable, or the equivalent of a long syllable; this equivalent is called a resolved stress, and consists of two syllables of which the first is short and the second is light enough to combine with the first to produce with it the metrical equivalent of a long syllable. Under certain conditions however the arsis consists of a short syllable.

¹ This chapter is based on the researches of Sievers, published in Paul and Braune's Beiträge, vols. x. and xii.

5. The thesis (or unaccented part of the foot) consists of a varying number of unaccented syllables; in the thesis no distinction is made between long and short syllables.

6. Alliteration, i.e. the riming of the initial sounds of words, or syllables, is employed to unite the two half-lines into the larger rhythmical unit of the complete line. Alliteration is confined to rhythmically accented syllables; any alliteration of unaccented syllables is to be regarded as accidental, and therefore without significance in the structure of the line. Alliterating syllables have the same initial consonant (st, sp, and sc alliterate each with itself only), or they have an initial vowel sound, any vowel or diphthong whatever alliterating with itself or with any other vowel sound.

7. The rhythmical accentuation coincides in general with the accentuation required by the sense. The four chief stresses of a complete line therefore fall upon the four most significant words or syllables of that line. The secondary stress on the second member of a compound word may, however, also be employed as an arsis.

8. Alliteration and rhythmical accentuation, therefore, conjointly give prominence to the logically significant elements of the line, but alliteration does not attend every rhythmical stress: in the second half-line alliteration marks the first stress; in the first half-line it marks either the first stress, or the first and the second, or, less frequently, the second only.

B. RHYTHMICAL TYPES.

The structure of the half-line, the primary structural unit in Anglo-Saxon versification, is represented in the following five types:

1. TYPE A. $\angle \times | \angle \times$

In type A the rhythm is trochaic:

stiðum wordum, Gen.¹ 2848^a

$\angle \times | \angle \times$

heorðgenēatas, M. 204^a,

$\angle \times | \angle \times$

¹ In this chapter Gen. = Genesis (i.e. The Offering of Isaac); Br. = The Battle of Brunanburh; M. = The Battle of Maldon; W. = The Wanderer; Ph. = The Phoenix; B. = Beowulf. The numerals refer to the continuous numbering of the lines, and the superior letters a and b denote respectively first and second half-lines.

With resolved stress :

eaforan þine , Gen. 2915 ^a ,	ú x ˘ x
feorh genērede , Br. 36 ^b ,	˘ x ú x
hæleða monegum , Ph. 170 ^b ,	ú x ú x

The last thesis must never exceed one syllable ; but no such restriction applies to the first, which has very often two syllables, and may be extended to three, or to four, or even to more.

fýsan tō fōre , Gen. 2860 ^a ,	˘ x x ˘ x
efste ōā swiðe , Gen. 2872 ^a ,	˘ x x ˘ x
flotena and Scotta , Br. 32 ^a ,	ú x x ˘ x
ýrmðu æfter æte , Ph. 405 ^a ,	˘ x x x ˘ x
sealde þām þe hē wolde , B. 3056 ^b ,	˘ x x x x ˘ x

In Anglo-Saxon versification some use is made of anacrusis, i.e. an unaccented syllable or two (sometimes more) may precede the regular structural type :

nē sunnan hætu , Ph. 17 ^a ,	x ˘ x ˘ x
geslōgen æt sæcce , Br. 4 ^a ,	x ˘ x x ˘ x
bibaðað in þām burnan , Ph. 26 ^a ,	x ú x x ˘ x
gewiten under waðeman , Ph. 97 ^a ,	x ú x x ú x
ābrægd þā mid ōý bille , Gen. 2931 ^a ,	x ˘ x x x ˘ x
þæt him fēla lāfe , B. 1033 ^a ,	x x ˘ x ˘ x

The thesis may be the second member of a compound, and therefore have a secondary stress ; when the first thesis with secondary stress is long, the second arsis is sometimes short :

glædmōd gyrneð , Ph. 462 ^a ,	˘ ˘ ˘ x
fæges fēorhhūs , M. 297 ^a ,	˘ x ˘ ˘
ferðloca frēorig , W. 33 ^a ,	˘ x x ˘ ˘
brimcald brecað , Ph. 67 ^a ,	˘ ˘ ú x
hēahmōd hefede , Ph. 112 ^a ,	˘ ˘ ú x
edgeong wesan , Ph. 435 ^a ,	˘ ˘ ú x

With anacrusis :

Hēr Æðelstān cyning , Br. 1 ^a ,	x ú x ˘ ú x
---	-----------------

When, in the first half-line, the alliteration is on the second arsis, the first arsis has the lighter stress, for alliteration marks the stronger stresses. It is here that the first thesis is usually expanded to a higher number of syllables:

sinðon þā bearwas, Ph. 71 ^a ,	∠ x x ∠ x
hæbbe ic gefrūnon, Ph. 1 ^a ,	∠ x x x ∠ x
nis þær on þām londe, Ph. 50 ^a ,	∠ x x x ∠ x
nū ēow is gerȳmed, M. 93 ^a ,	∠ x x x ∠ x
oð þæt hē gesēceð, Ph. 166 ^a ,	∠ x x x ∠ x
ūtan ymbe æðelne, Ph. 164 ^a ,	∠ x x x ǫx swylce ðær ēac sē frōða, Br. 37 ^a ,	∠ x x x x ∠ x
tō raþe hine gelettē, M. 164 ^a ,	∠ x x x x x ∠ x

With anacrusis:

gewāt him þā sē æðeling, Gen. 2884 ^a ,	x ∠ x x x ǫx
---	------------------

2. TYPE B. x ∠ | x ∠

In type B the rhythm is iambic:

þin āgen bearn, Gen. 2851 ^a ,	x ∠ x ∠
nē winterscūr, Ph. 18 ^b ,	x ∠ x ∠
þurh meotudes meaht, Ph. 6 ^a ,	x ǫx x ∠
nē hrimes dryre, Ph. 16 ^b ,	x ∠ x ǫx
nē ðene nē ðalu, Ph. 24 ^a ,	x ǫx x ǫx

There is freedom in the number of syllables constituting the first thesis; in the second thesis this number varies between one and two.

With one syllable in the second thesis:

þonne sorg and slæp, W. 39 ^a ,	x x ∠ x ∠
nis sē foldan scēat, Ph. 3 ^b ,	x x ∠ x ∠ is þæt æpele lond, Ph. 20 ^b ,	x x ǫx x ∠
ðær þæs bæcnes cyme, Ph. 107 ^b ,	x x ∠ x ǫx
swā sē haswa fugel, Ph. 121 ^b ,	x x ∠ x ǫx
þonne onwæcneð eft, W. 45 ^a ,	x x x ∠ x ∠
on þone æðelan wong, Ph. 281 ^b ,	x x x ǫx x ∠
þāra þe þær gūð fornam, B. 1124 ^b ,	x x x x ∠ x ∠
þonne hē of grēote his, Ph. 267 ^b ,	x x x x ∠ x ∠

With two syllables in the second thesis:

eald ęta geweorc, W. 87 ^a ,	x ∠ x x ∠
and þriwa ascæceð, Ph. 144 ^b ,	x ∠ x x ǫx
hwider hreþra gehygd, W. 72 ^a ,	x x ∠ x x ∠

ofer waþema gebind, W. 57 ^a ,	x x ǰ x x ǰ
sē hit on frymþe gescōp, Ph. 84 ^b ,	x x x ǰ x x ǰ
þæt þū him ondrædan ne þearft, B. 1675 ^b ,	x x x x ǰ x x ǰ
þāra þe hit mid mundum bewand, B. 1462 ^b ,	x x x x x ǰ x x ǰ

3. TYPE C. x ǰ | ǰ x

The juxtaposition of the two stresses gives to the rhythm of type C a peculiar character. The alliteration, when single, is always on the first stress:

and forð gangan, M. 3 ^b ,	x ǰ ǰ x
tō scype gangon, M. 56 ^b ,	x ǰ ǰ x

The first thesis admits of a varying number of syllables, but the final thesis, as in type A, never exceeds one syllable:

þæt hī forð ēodon, M. 229 ^b ,	x x ǰ ǰ x
and tō hige gōdum, M. 4 ^b ,	x x ǰ ǰ x
þe hī þæt gyf þēgun, Ph. 410 ^b ,	x x x ǰ ǰ x
þonne æfre byre mōnnes, Ph. 128 ^b ,	x x x x ǰ ǰ x
þāra þe hē him mid hæfde, B. 1626 ^b ,	x x x x x ǰ ǰ x

In compensation for this juxtaposition of the two stresses, the second stress is often on a short syllable:

ofer dēop wæter, Gen. 2875 ^b ,	x x ǰ ǰ x
hēt þā bord beran, M. 62 ^a ,	x x ǰ ǰ x
þætte is feor heonan, Ph. 1 ^b ,	x x ǰ ǰ x
onblēot þæt lāc Gode, Gen. 2933 ^a ,	x x x ǰ ǰ x

It is a special characteristic of this type that the two accents of a compound word (the primary and the secondary accent) are freely used to satisfy the conditions of the two rhythmical stresses; the secondary accent may be on a long or on a short syllable.

With the secondary accent (in the second stress) on a long syllable:

eal geondþence, W. 60 ^b ,	x ǰ ǰ x
his winedryhtnes, W. 37 ^b ,	x ǰ ǰ x
nē tō hrædwyrde, W. 66 ^b ,	x x ǰ ǰ x
on þām willwōnge, Ph. 89 ^a ,	x x ǰ ǰ x
under heofunhrōfe, Ph. 173 ^a ,	x x ǰ ǰ x
swā þā foregengan, Ph. 437 ^b ,	x x ǰ ǰ x

Present participles and derivatives in -ing, -lic, may take an additional (secondary) accent:

þær him hettende , Ph. 441 ^b ,	x x ∠ ∠ x
hwilc þæs ævelinges , Gen. 2847 ^a ,	x x ǰ ∠ x
gewit þū ofestlice , Gen. 2849 ^a ,	x x x ǰ ∠ x

With the secondary accent on a short syllable:

on folcstede , Br. 41 ^b ,	x ∠ ǰ x
and sincþege , W. 34 ^b ,	x ∠ ǰ x
in gēardagum , W. 44 ^a ,	x ∠ ǰ x
þonne dēaſſræced , Ph. 48 ^b ,	x x ∠ ǰ x

The second class of weak verbs and derivatives in -ig, -en, may take an additional (secondary) accent:

geseah hlifigan (= hlifian), Gen. 2877 ^a ,	x x ∠ ǰ x
swā sē gesæliġa , Ph. 350 ^a ,	x x x ∠ ǰ x
gegrundene , M. 109 ^a ,	x ∠ ǰ x
unbefohtene , M. 57 ^a ,	x x ∠ ǰ x

4. TYPE D: (a) D¹. ∠ | ∠ x x; (b) D². ∠ | ∠ x x

In type D the first foot consists of an arsis only; in compensation for this brevity, the second foot has three parts: an arsis, a secondary stress, and a thesis. This structural requirement of a secondary stress is met by the frequent introduction of compounds. Double alliteration (in the first half-line) is here very frequent. The secondary stress occurs either immediately after the second thesis, or on the final syllable.

(a) D¹. ∠ | ∠ x x

Here the secondary stress is immediately after the second thesis. Present participles and derivatives in -ing, -lic, -en, -er, -ig, may take an additional (secondary) stress. The syllable under the secondary stress is in most instances long:

geong edniwe , Ph. 258 ^b ,	∠ ∠ ∼ x
wadan wræclāstas , W. 5 ^a ,	ǰ ∠ ∼ x
lic leoſſcræftig , Ph. 268 ^a ,	∠ ǰ x ∼ x
lucon lagustrēamas , M. 66 ^a ,	ǰ ǰ x ∼ x
forð foldwege , Gen. 2873 ^a ,	∠ ∠ ∼ x
sæliſſende , B. 377 ^b ,	∠ ∠ ∼ x

wine Scyldinga, B. 30 ^b ,	ú ˘ ˘ x
hring gyldenne, B. 2810 ^b ,	˘ ˘ ˘ x
frēan ūserne, B. 3003 ^b ,	˘ ˘ ˘ x
rād ænigne, B. 3081 ^b ,	˘ ˘ ˘ x

With anacrusis:

āweaht wrætlice, Ph. 367 ^a ,	x ˘ ˘ ˘ x
gewēold wigsigor, B. 1555 ^a ,	x ˘ ˘ ˘ x

The second arsis is occasionally short:

hēahcyninges, B. 1040 ^b ,	˘ ˘ ˘ x
--------------------------------------	-----------

The forms of the second conjugation are often used with a secondary stress:

hām siðle, M. 251 ^b ,	˘ ˘ ˘ x
hand wisode, M. 141 ^b ,	˘ ˘ ˘ x
bord hafenode, M. 309 ^b ,	˘ ú ˘ x
woruld staðelode, Ph. 130 ^b ,	ú ú ˘ x

With a short second thesis:

andswarode, B. 258 ^b ,	˘ ˘ ˘ x
-----------------------------------	-----------

(b) D². ˘ | ˘ x ˘

Here the secondary stress is on the final syllable:

wis ealdorman, M. 219 ^a ,	˘ ˘ x ˘
flet innanweard, B. 1977 ^b ,	˘ ˘ x ˘
wer wintrum geong, Gen. 2888 ^a ,	˘ ˘ x ˘
fareð feðrum snell, Ph. 123 ^a ,	ú ˘ x ˘
duguð ellor sēoc, B. 2255 ^b ,	ú ˘ x ˘

With anacrusis:

āris rices weard, B. 1391 ^a ,	x ˘ ˘ x ˘
--	---------------

In a succession of three words (as in the last four examples) the second word has a stronger stress than the third; for these two being more closely united logically and grammatically than the first and second, the third is somewhat enclitically related to the second.

earn æses georn, M. 107 ^a ,	˘ ˘ x ˘
ufan, engla sum, Gen. 2908 ^a ,	ú ˘ x ˘
earn æftan hwit, Br. 63 ^a ,	˘ ˘ x ˘
clufon celled bord, M. 283 ^a ,	ú ˘ x ˘
blād wīde sprang, B. 18 ^b ,	˘ ˘ x ˘

Type D (both D¹ and D²) is also expanded by the admission of an unaccented syllable after the first arsis.

Expanded D¹:

wrixleð wōðcræfte, Ph. 127 ^a ,	∠ x ∠ ∼ x
easforan Eadweardes, Br. 7 ^a ,	∪ x ∠ ∼ x
hēowon heaðōlinde, Br. 5 ^a ,	∠ x ∪ ∼ x
mēcum mylenscearpum, Br. 24 ^a ,	∠ x ∪ ∼ x
cūðra cwidegleda, W. 55 ^a ,	∠ x ∪ ∼ x
caldum cylegicelum, Ph. 59 ^a ,	∠ x ∪ ∪ x
sunu and swæs fæder, Ph. 375 ^a ,	∪ x ∠ ∼ x
beorna bēahgifa, Br. 2 ^a ,	∠ x ∠ ∼ x
grēteð gliwstafum, W. 52 ^a ,	∠ x ∠ ∼ x
sigora sōðcyning, Ph. 493 ^a ,	∪ x ∠ ∼ x
mōdge maguþegnas, W. 62 ^a ,	∠ x ∪ ∼ x

With anacrusis:

onbryrðed brēostsefa, Ph. 126 ^a ,	x ∠ x ∠ ∼ x
--	-----------------

Expanded D²:

wērig wiges sæd, Br. 20 ^a ,	∠ x ∠ x ∼
wōd þā wiges heard, M. 130 ^a ,	∠ x ∠ x ∼
fīeogan feðrum snell, Ph. 166 ^b ,	∠ x ∠ x ∼
drēorig daroða lāf, Br. 54 ^a ,	∠ x ∪ x ∼
hālges hlēoðorcwide, Ph. 399 ^a ,	∠ x ∠ x ∪

With anacrusis:

oðfīeogeð feðrum snel, Ph. 347 ^a ,	x ∠ x ∠ x ∼
---	-----------------

There are some instances of an apparent expansion of the thesis:

ealdor āna gehwæs, Ph. 487 ^a ,	∠ x ∠ x x ∼
hlēor bolster onfēng, B. 689 ^b ,	∠ ∠ x x ∼
cyning caldre benēat, B. 2397 ^b ,	∪ ∠ x x ∼

But it is to be observed that a syllable in r may be slurred so as not to have full rhythmical value; e.g. in wōd wintercearig, W. 24^a, winter (= wintr) is rhythmically equivalent to a monosyllable, the scansion being therefore regular: ∠ | ∠ ∼ x. So in the preceding examples, bolster (and so possibly āna and caldre) has perhaps merely monosyllabic value.

5. TYPE E. $\angle \times \times | \angle$

In type E the foot of three parts precedes the foot of one part. This type is closely related to type D, consisting in most cases of the same elements in the inverse order.

With compounds in the first foot:

andlangne dæg, Br. 21 ^a ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
gylþwordum spræc, M. 274 ^b ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
hrimcealde sæ, W. 4 ^b ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
wēatācen nān, Ph. 51 ^b ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
ēastdælum on, Ph. 2 ^a ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
heaðorōfēs hūs, Ph. 228 ^a ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
wuduhoitum in, Ph. 362 ^b ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
ginfæstum gifum, Gen. 2919 ^a ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
Brimmanna boda, M. 49 ^a ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
winemæga hryre, W. 7 ^b ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
wudubēama wite, Ph. 75 ^a ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
brynegield onhrēad, Gen. 2931 ^b ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
sunbeorht gesetu, Ph. 278 ^a ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$

Occasionally there is a trisyllabic compound with the secondary stress on a short syllable:

Syrwara lond, Ph. 166 ^b ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
Sūðdēna folc, B. 463 ^b ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$

With the secondary stress on a derivative syllable:

scyppendes giefu, Ph. 327 ^b ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
ætterne ord, M. 146 ^a ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
āgenne eard, Ph. 264 ^a ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
drēorigne fand, B. 2790 ^b ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
ofstlice scēat, M. 143 ^b ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$
wurðlice wræc, M. 279 ^a ,	$\angle \times \times \angle$

With anacrusis:

ongan ceallian þā, M. 91 ^a ,	$\times \times \angle \times \times \angle$
---	---

In a succession of three words (cf. D²) the third word has a stronger stress than the second, for the second is somewhat subordinate logically and grammatically either to the first or to the third:

feorh geong onfōn , Ph. 192 ^a ,	└ ˘ x └
twelf siðum hine , Ph. 106 ^b ,	└ ˘ x ʒ
dæges þridðan ūp , Gen. 2875 ^a ,	ʒ ˘ x └
ufan engla sum , Gen. 2908 ^a ,	ʒ ˘ x └
sweord ær gemealt , B. 1616 ^b ,	└ ˘ x └
nefa swiðe hold , B. 2171 ^b ,	ʒ ˘ x └

Type E admits of an expansion of the thesis to two syllables:

drȳmendra gedryht , Ph. 348 ^a ,	└ ˘ x x └
sēllicran gecynd , Ph. 329 ^b ,	└ ˘ x x └
searolice beseted , Ph. 297 ^a ,	ʒ ˘ x x ʒ
ēadigra gehwylc , Ph. 381 ^b ,	└ ˘ x x └
sorgfulran gesetu , Ph. 417 ^a ,	└ ˘ x x └
wifhādes þe weres , Ph. 357 ^a ,	└ ˘ x x ʒ

The first stress is occasionally followed by a thesis, but in most cases this may be eliminated by slurring a syllable in l, r, or n:

fifelcynnes eard , B. 104 ^b ,	└ (x) ˘ x └
ealdorlangne tīr , Br. 3 ^b ,	└ (x) ˘ x └
irenendum fæst , B. 999 ^b ,	└ (x) ˘ x └

Very rarely an inversion of the parts of D² occurs, producing what should strictly be called E²:

morðorbeð strēd , B. 2437 ^b ,	└ x ˘ └
---	-----------

In some instances what would otherwise conform to the E type is converted into the A type by the addition of a final thesis:

gūðmōde grummon , B. 306 ^a ,	└ x x └
egeslic for eorlum , B. 1650 ^a ,	ʒ x x └ x
Bēowulf was brēme , B. 18 ^a ,	└ x x └ x
morðorbealo māga , B. 1080 ^a ,	└ x x x └ x
cunnode georne , Gen. 2846 ^b ,	└ x x └ x

6. HYPERMETRICAL TYPES.

A special modification of the preceding types is occasioned by the introduction of an additional foot at the beginning of a half-line otherwise rhythmically normal. These hypermetrical half-lines occur either singly or in groups, and usually add dignity to the sense and movement of the passage.

For the hypermetrical types occurring in the poems given in this Reader, the scansion given below may be adopted. In the first half-line the additional foot shares the alliteration of the line; in the second half-line the alliteration usually marks the second stress, seldom the first:

Gen. 2854-2858:

{	∠ x ∠ x ∠ x	∠ x x ∪ x ∠ x
	or ∠ x ∠ ∠ x
	∠ x x ∠ x ∠ x	∠ x x ∠ x ∠ x
	∠ x ∠ x ∠ x
	∪ x ∠ x ∠ x	∠ x x ∠ x ∠ x
	∠ x ∠ x ∠ x	∠ x ∠ x ∠ x

Gen. 2865-2868:

∠ x ∠ x ∠ x	∠ x x x ∠ x ∠ x
∪ x x ∠ x ∪ x	x ∠ x x x ∪ x ∠ x
∪ x ∠ x ∠ x	∠ x x ∠ x ∠ x
∠ ∠ ∠ ∠ x	∠ x x ∠ x ∠ x

W. 65^a; 111-115:

{	∠ x x x ∪ ∠ x
	or ∠ x x x ∪ ∠ x ∠ x ∠ x x ∠ x x ∠ x ∠ x x ∠ x

GLOSSARY.

The vowels a and æ have the same position; ö (y) follows i; otherwise the order is strictly alphabetic. The abbreviations employed (exclusive of the most obvious) are the following: The numerals in parentheses, (1), (2), etc., indicate the classes of the ablaut verbs; (W. I.), (W. II.), (W. III.), those of the weak verbs; (R.) the reduplicating, and (PP.) the preteritive present verbs.—ger. (= gerund); imp. (= imperative); pp. (= perfect participle); ptc. (= present participle); S. (= Slevens' Grammar, translated by Cook).
